—and on and on—without heeding whether such grief as he felt today was a new experience in a man's life. When some three months ago Beatrice told him she could not love him, the shock as we know was great, but in spite of it Beatrice was still the Beatrice of his dreams. Then there was hope; there is always hope in such cases. But now none! Not a vestige!

He laughed bitterly as he thought of the hours he had spent endeavoring to find the cause of what he had called Beatrice's complaint of her general spikity and indifference to the world at large. Now he had got at the very germ of the disease. No wonder she was cold and reserved with such a secret to carry—such a dread everhauling her. Poor girl! Poor girl!

He could see how the boy's coming to Haverhill had been arranged. Through Mrs. Miller, of course. And by his new light he was able to explain a discrepancy which had always troubled him. On the night she had him hope and wait, the nurse had told him that Beatrice had saved her years ago from starvation, whereas, however had told him that until she came to the house she was a stranger to them all. He had not thought it worth while to pursue the inquiry.

She, this strangely named woman, had made him promise to wait. Wait for what? There was nothing to wait for. Even if he, as he scornfully told himself he could, should forget his husband and be willing to take Beatrice as his wife even now he knew that a further, never to be clinched, would be asked by her. He did not want her to this. He knew that for all that had befell her she was mourning in mortal sackcloth and ashes. He had no place to give her, no home to visit.

She had not tried to win his love, she had not accepted that love when offered. Too well he knew what yet he knew also that she loved him—loved him but would never be his. The thought drove him wild mad. No friend as Carrington would have known him, as with heavy brow and bent head he walked through those quiet streets of suburban London.

But why the fight? No new dream, no new dream could have threatened her. But she after all, by because he was coming to Haverhill? Did she fear that her resolution must give way, and with new breath she must move her love, and with the next tell her later that love could not be between them? No. A word from her would have meant the ending. She had seen no sign of what she had seen. She was not crying from him.

Then the thought of that man who was seeking her name in his soul. He remembered and his life, he knew—no way. But his first thought was to trace this man's name and hear why he wanted Beatrice.

Beatrice changed. He would not work him. He had no time to know. After what had been that morning, he had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

could now think of was Beatrice and her sorrow. All he asked was to be able to see her and tell her there was one who would ever be as a brother to her. The will resolve that he would now acquire in his disappearance as easily as did her unless discovered. He would find her. He would gather her, take her hand, if it were possible, stand before her and what she had to fear, but he knew now, or thought he knew, the utmost that he had to give him, and he saw in it a sorry substitute for what it had seemed to promise—only a few days ago.

Blame her? Why should he blame her? How had she wronged him?

CHAPTER XXVII.

A HELPING HAND.

To make up one's mind; to vow to find a young woman who had disappeared without leaving a trace is one thing—to find her is another. The world is a place of considerable size.

And chance meetings are not so common as the conflicting novel reader is asked to believe. Such was at least the experience of two men, who, from different motives, were equally anxious to find the fugitive. The first Maurice Hervey, the second Frank Carrington. Hervey, who, having paid a second visit to Glastbury, had in a way arranged to learn that Beatrice the boy and the nurse had gone to London, had a hasty note to Blackstone and returned to the capital. The more he studied the situation, the more apparent it became that, to use his own words, he was in a cliff-struck. So long as Beatrice could conceal her whereabouts from him, so long was he utterly helpless. He could, of course, compass a certain amount of revenge but the cost would be too terrible. However sweet a thing may be, it may be bought too dearly. He could walk boldly up to Sir Malguy Clouston and prevail himself his son-in-law. He could go to these Talbot and show them that he married their niece when she was little more than a school-girl. But what good would this do? He felt would be shot, and his quiver held no other. It might bring down Beatrice, but not her money. He would have to deal with men of the world instead of a woman over whom he held the terror of exposure. He had one article to sell, silence. There was one customer for it, his wife. With her he could trade to advantage, but the moment he broke back for another market the commodity became all but valueless.

Again, there was that cursed claim in old Talbot's will. Hervey could easily prove that Beatrice was his wife, but in doing so he also proved that she had married, when under age, without her trustee's consent, and the said trustee could do almost exactly as they liked with her fortune! Probably they would throw him two hundred a year so long as he kept out of the way. What was two hundred a year when he knew that he had not invited on bringing some one's head down to the dust, he might have had ten times the amount? Why had he not taken the money and forgiven the revenge?

In fact, Beatrice's flight, although not effected for strategic reasons, was a masterpiece; a move which bound her enemy hand and foot. Savagely he looked forward to the time when circumstances would force him to take the best offer made him. Well he knew that the moment Beatrice moved he would reveal the truth to her friends, the moment she showed to confess her, glibly fully, and face what change and his might be due to her, every shred of power he held would be gone. It was, therefore, imperative he should find Beatrice and regain vengeance upon a head more treacherous to her. Reflection and the risk he now ran of losing everything quite him, refused to lower his demands. He would take fifteen hundred, even a half of his wife's fortune, and if she wished it, would enter into a regular deed of judicial separation. He would be silent so long as the money was paid him before he was silent.

Was it to be given out that he was dead and would never see her again? No! He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know. He would not work him. He had no time to know.

Our Delegate.

When we arrived home we found a communication here written from Academy favoring a Webster county man for House of Delegates. We cannot agree with him that Webster county is entitled to the delegate even if that county has never had a chance to vote for U. S. Senator. The man who is sent from this delegate district is sworn to represent his constituents, no matter which county he is from. Webster had the delegate in the last session and it is Pocahontas' turn now. We believe an arrangement was made a few years ago by which Webster was to have the delegate one term and Pocahontas two terms; but, even ignoring this fact, it is nothing but fair that this county should have the delegate—term about. It is claimed by some Webster delegates that their man ought to serve one full term—four years. Now everybody knows that the delegate from Webster county served a full term, which is only two years, and moreover we don't believe that a large majority of the people of Webster favor a man from that county. Our correspondent fur-says that to nominate a man from Webster county will be the means of uniting the Democracy to a man and success will be the result. We cannot agree with him in this matter. To make a success is to nominate a man from our own county. We hope that Webster delegates will come to the convention at this place Friday with a determination to nominate a man from our county, and pledge themselves to go home and work for his success and never quit work until the election is over and our delegate has a large majority given him than any delegate has ever had in the two counties.

The Court House.

Our first editorial on this subject was replied to at length by our Editor correspondent. We then had the right under the rules of debate to close by replying to him, which our last editorial only did without attempting to raise any new issue or point. That then ended the matter as this is the rule adopted and followed by us in all discussions of this character. We have this week received a lengthy communication carrying the debate further which to publish would be changing our rule. Our correspondent, therefore, must excuse us for not giving him more latitude than we would be willing to others, and in no sense would we have him think that his structure on the editorial management and ability of this paper in any way limits us from giving place to his correspondence. The debate has closed under parliamentary rules.

Green Bank Convention.

Pursuant to call of the Democratic Executive Committee the convention met on the 14th inst., and S. B. Hannah was elected Chairman and C. O. Arbogast, Secretary. On motion the chair appointed Wm. F. Arbogast, Dr. C. L. Austin, R. B. Kerr and Wm. On motion it was decided that any one or any portion of the delegates in attendance at the convention are authorized to cast such vote as the district is entitled in joint convention.

A young man from Pittsburg passed through town Monday en route to Staunton. He was riding a bicycle. A man above town saw him and greatly frightened rushed home and told his wife they must have prayer at once, because the day of judgment was coming, sure. He said he knew it because he saw the d—d—straddle of a buggy wheel going up to Beverly after the lawyers.—Philippi Phindexter.

It is announced that the Administration has concluded to put the Morrison surplus resolution into practical effect notwithstanding its failure to become a law by Mr. Cleveland's omission to give it his signature. A call is to be at once made for $15,000,000 bonds, which, it is alleged, is to be promptly followed by similar calls at monthly intervals. Apparently the President has caught a whopper from the people since his pocket vote of the measure.—E. E.

Messrs. C. & W. had a few words about their turkey pasture last week. Mr. C. says he will either pay Mr. W. for his turkey pasture or muzzle his turkeys.

Your correspondent had the pleasure of attending an all day meeting at the Drop last Sunday. Three excellent sermons were delivered to a large, attentive and appreciative audience—one by Rev. D. S. Sydenstricker, one by Rev. Wm. E. Miller and one by Rev. Hannah.

Jos. Varner, lost a fine cow Sunday last. An investigation developed the fact that several bones about 10 or 12 inches long had gotten into the cow's stomach and grown fast. It is supposed that she either desiring salt swallowed the bones, or they were taken in, in her sleep.—Mt. News.

Notes on Schools and Teaching.

BY J. W. FITZ.

As much time and money have been wasted by parents sending their children to the Universities lacking sound training in first class preparatory schools, I am induced to write a few articles on this most important subject.

I know no really first class preparatory school in W. Va. This want must be supplied. We have a vigorous and growing State. The wealth is greater than the educational development of the people.

The people must realize that the public school is very elementary, and the instruction is them. hardly deserves the name of education.

Very many in our state, who would be called rich elsewhere, are utterly regardless of the claims of a higher education.

Let us scout the idea that the public school is a great thing, but rather let us consider it but the shadow and skeleton of an education.

We need teachers of highly cultivated minds and those cannot be supplied, as long as the people are hampered with a class of men, who suppose their with the "book" that "reading, citing and expounding" are the ultima ratio of intellectual growth.

High School.

DEAR TIMES—It may not be generally known among your readers, that a High School has been attempted here.

The first session has just closed. The final exercises occurred Friday afternoon, July 30th. Where all acquitted themselves so well, it would be invidious to give special commendation.

Readings were given by Lock Kee, Willie Price and Florence Price.

Exercises in Elocution were rendered by Misses Jane Moore, Susy Price and Master Norman Price.

A dialogue was given by Maude Kee and Anna McGlaughlin, it was very harmoniously rendered.

Essays upon Home, Africa and American Revolution were read by Miss Eliza Kee and Andrew Jones Price in the order mentioned. A poem prepared for the occasion was recited by Anna S. Price.

The school room was handsomely decorated with evergreen and wild flowers and the whole it was a most enjoyable affair. It is hoped there is more and better to follow.

The Principal, Rev. Wm. T. Price, having a family to educate has opened the school and proposes to teach along with his own children any who may be induced to attend. In the school, common branches, Mathematics, Languages and Natural science are taught at $1.50 per month. The Principal is an A. M. of Washington & Lee University and has had considerable experience in teaching.

The following is the poem written for the occasion:

School days, like birds on rapid wings,
Are flying fast away.

O, ye, whose time of life it is,
Breathe not a wish to speed their flight,
But rather bid them stay!

Our life, at very best, is short,
Youth, middle years and age.
Appear like actors passing close,
With eyes a-fleet and busy hands
To drive each from the stage.

God wills it thus, we cannot change
Time's rushing, mighty wave—
What can we do? Ah question wise!
Now listen well—ye can do much,
The passing years to save.

Perform your duty, fill your sphere,
Love God and follow man;
Your banner raise against the wrong,
Shun idleness that doth lie sin,
And labor while you can.

Think you we've shall meet the years,
That here will come no more?
Ah! yes, in higher state than this We'll pass those years in close review
And scan their record o'er!

Then let us all—the young and old
Improve the time that's given.
Be steady youth—be hopeful age—
The race is short, 'tis quickly run.
And note every faithful one
The end of it is Heaven!

A Sabbath-Keeping Nation.

Our Nation has been pre-eminent by a Sabbath-keeping Nation. If we have lost much of the Puritanic spirit in religion, we have not given up the idea that the Sabbath was made for man, and that its observance is not only good for the individual, but highly beneficial to society, and consequently, to the Nation. Nothing is better settled than that a periodical rest-day is a physical necessity. The French Revolutionists, who sought to destroy utterly all Christian institutions, believed they would accomplish much in this direction by obliterating the Sabbath. They were too wise, however, not to see that some substitute must be provided, so they ordained that every tenth day should be a rest-day. This was an acknowledgment that the Sabbath was founded on a principle which long experience had proved to be a sound principle. There is no question on this point among the American people. The number of those who would abolish the Sabbath as a rest-day is very small indeed. The Sabbath is really a national institution in this respect, all our governing authorities, National, State and municipal, and all our courts of record refraining from transacting business on that day.

But to individuals the Sabbath should be something more than a rest-day. The law requires the cessation of labor, not only that physical benefits may result but in order that individuals may worship God undisturbed by the noise and distractions of industry and commerce. Our churches open wide their doors, and the throngs enter and pay their allegiance to the King of Kings. It is in such occasions that the individual sanctifies the day, strengthens his own moral and religious character, and fits himself for the highest duties of citizenship. The Sabbath is, therefore, a day of moral education and recuperation, and it will be a sad day for our Nation when, if ever, it ceases to be, in this sense, a Sabbath-keeping Nation.

We ask no laws from Congress or State Legislature to command religious devotion. We ask nothing more than compulsory cessation of business, and restraint of immorality from the State. The Church will do the rest. The Church will sanctify the day. The Church will provide such instruction as men need to make their moral and religious beings, and men so educated are the best, the staunchest and the most intelligent citizens, such such citizens are the only source and safeguard of national prosperity.

Let us, then, maintain the Sabbath, not simply by enforcing the laws which compel cessation of labor, but by using the day for physical rest and for the cultivation of our moral and spiritual powers. When shall we truly observe, and honor it. Then shall we have our citizenship in this great Republic.

lie and strengthen the Nation's hands for the work that is before it.—[N. Y. Independent.]

Words of Wisdom.

Choose always the way that seems best, however rough it may be. Custom will render it easy and agreeable.

The bow cannot possibly stand always bent, nor can human nature or human frailty exist without some lawful recreation.

Pastime is a word that should never be used but in a bad sense; it is foolish to say that a thing is agreeable because it helps to pass the time away.

There is some help for the defects of fortune, for if a man cannot attain to the length of his wishes he may have his remedy by cutting them shorter.

Worldly faces never look so worldly as at a funeral. They have the same effect of grating incongruity as the sound of a coarse voice breaking the solemn silence of night.

There are moments when by some strange impulse we contradict our past selves—fatal moments, when a fit of passion, like a stream of lava, lays low the work of half our lives.

If heaven consists in a state of holy dispositions and affections, and not in "pearly gates and purling brooks," this is the state we ought to cultivate if we would reach the heavenly life.

Good resolutions are often like a loosely tied cord—on the first strain of temptation they slip. They should be tied in a hard knot of prayer, and then they should be kept tight and firm by stretching Godward.

Fare and Home.

Never feed a horse with hay from a rack located above his head, as a draught beats down which is injurious, and the dust is liable to injure the eyes.—[Montreal Witness.]

Paint costs little, but agricultural implements are expensive. By coating them with the oiler every season a great saving is made, for agricultural implements may be used many years longer than is usual by the judicious and timely application of paint.—[Albany Journal.]

Farmers who grow only a few tons, use in rich gardens do not generally know that this vegetable is more successfully grown in fields with moderate fertility. There is less exhaustion of soil and earlier and higher flavored fruit, with less tendency to rot.

Charcoal is associated by a whole of all kinds. The very best is found in charred grain. Corn roasted like coffee and fed once a day, would, no doubt, pay for the trouble in the increased profits of eggs. In fattening, the process is much hastened by its use, and we think the meat much more palatable. There are many epicures who would willingly pay a larger price for poultry fattened by the use of charred corn.—[Chicago Times.]

Hot water is the best thing that can be used to heat a grain or brine. The wooden part should be placed in water as hot as can be borne for fifteen or twenty minutes, and in all ordinary cases the pain will gradually disappear. Hot water applied by the means of cloths is a sovereign remedy for rheumatism and pleurisy pains. For haemorrhoids or piles, apply cloths well saturated with hot steam water, keeping the injured parts covered from the air.—[Boston Herald.]

A cultured woman out West, going riding with her husband, threatened to throw herself and three horses into the water. She would surely have drowned but for a passing boatman. It is supposed that the boatman had been waiting for years to revenge himself for some old score or other against the husband.—[N. Y. Times.]

Settled the Bill.

A circuit rider in a neighborhood with which he was unacquainted, stopped a man in the road and asked,

"My friend, can you tell me of a place where a preacher can stay all night without money and without price?"

"Yes, in the woods."

"Of course, but can't you tell me of some house?"

"Yes, (pointing) that one up on yon hill."

"Will it cost me anything?"

"Not a cent."

"Who lives there?"

"Nobody."

"I don't want to stay in a vacant house. Come, now, good man, tell me of a place."

"Well, I will. Go about twomiles down this road, then turn to the left. The first house you strike will be old Sam Potters. He'll take you in."

"But will he charge anything?"

"Not a cent."

"Treat me well, of course?"

"Like yer judge give you the best in the house."

"Will he feed my horse?"

"He'll funder him if you say so."

"I am a thousand times obliged to you."

"Say," the man called, as the preacher started off, "he's a sorter criss fellow, an' if you ask him how much he charges he'll git mad. Just act like you was at home, and it'll be all right with him."

"Thank you, I'll do so."

The preacher found old Potter to be a tall, gaunt man, with a harsh voice and grizzled beard. Just before bed time the minister asked Mr. Potter if he would join him in prayer.

"Not just yet," Potter replied. "Just git down and pray when yer feel like it. Don't wait on me, fer I've got ter feed the hogs afore I go to bed."

After breakfast the next morning, when the preacher's horse had been saddled, the reverend gentleman turned to Potter and said:

"Well, I have a place. I always feel that I was forgetting something."

"Never hear you preach, but jugin' by the way you talk, I reckon you air or po' preacher."

"I mean that I haven't any money."

"Not my fault."

"That's all very well but I can't pay you."

"Then I'll have to take it outen your hide."

"Look here, my friend—"

"Oh, I'm lookin'. Goin' to keep my eyes on you."

"I say that a man told me that I could stay here without charge."

"Yes, but I wan't the man."

"I really can't pay you."

"What, after eatin as much as you have? W'y, parson, you can make a table look the delicatest an' puniest uv any man I ever seen. The very first pass you made, the hind leg of a shoat disappeared, an' then you made a motion at the last pound of butter we had, an' it wasn't no longer for this here arth."

"I admit I was hungry, but—"

"Oh, you needn't admit it, fur I soon discovered that fact."

"This is surely a very awkward position. I really do not know what to do."

"Settle up, is the only advice I've got to offer."

"But I really can not."

"Then some of your hide must come off."

"I wish you had more seal."

"Yas, an' I wish you had more money."

"You certainly would not commit an act of violence merely for a few dimes?"

"Yas b'lieve I would."

"My friend, I'm on my way to feed my flock, and—"

"I reckon you think mo'er bout feedin' yourself. W'y, that dish uv cabbage turned pale every time you looked at it. I ken stand er good deal, but when a vildluts cyclone comes along it breaks me up."

"I am occupying a terribly awkward position."

"Better squat, then."

"If you'll let me off I'll send you the money."

"No, I'm enforced that after you begin to feed your flock you won't think uv a stoner like me."

"Well, I declare I am in an awkward position."

"Yas, so I've heard."

"Is there no way by which we can settle this affair?"

"Oh, yes; pay up."

"But I tell you I have no money."

"Yes, so I've heard."

"Well, as you have driven me to the wall I suppose I must fight you."

morning to see you whapped. Say, what business was you in before you gunter fight?"

"I was a prize fighter," the preacher replied, as he seated himself and smooth-back his hair.

The Record of the Democratic House.

In a partisan debate spring upon the House in its closing hours by the Republicans, who desired to put on record a barbaresque resolution showing what the Democrats did not do, Mr. Randall summarized the results of the Democratic legislation as follows:

"Mr. Speaker, we are all about to return to the people who sent us here, and the record of this House will be weighed and measured by them. The results of our action will be carefully scanned, and the elections will show whether in the popular judgment the party in control of this House to-day should receive the respect and approval for the future of the American people. Let me recite a few of the results of their legislation.

"We have returned to the public domain millions of acres of public lands sought to be unlawfully kept by insatiate corporations, reaching 70,000,000 acres.

"We have entered upon the work of constructing a new navy. We have passed every act that we have been asked to pass for the purpose of bettering the condition of the working people of the United States. We have not in a single instance, so far as I remember, passed through the House a bill in favor of monopolies. We have given the Senate opportunity to join with us in passing an inter-State commerce bill which only forty men on the other side dared to vote against. But for the delay involved in the present proceeding on the other side, we should probably have reached an opportunity of passing a bill to increase the pensions of one-armed and one-legged soldiers.

"Finally, I say deliberately that the appropriation bills as they have passed this House are so far as I know, freer from suspicious or unnecessary propositions than they have been in any congress since the war, whether this remark applies to the appropriations reported from the committee over which I have the honor to preside or those emanating from the other committees having charge of appropriation bills. Whatever may be the result of the next election, I venture to say we have done so well that we ought to command, and I believe will command, the confidence and approval of the American people.

"Say more; when we came here thousands and thousands of working people throughout the United States were idle. Even in my own city the number ran up to tens of thousands. But to-day, so far as my information gives me knowledge, there are few laboring men who want work and cannot secure it (applause) and I said that this is due in a large degree to the confidence which this Democratic House and Democratic Executive in direction of good government have given to the American people." (Applause.)

According to an English statistician first seen here in the city, work on the 15th, 18th, and 21st of last.

The first printing done in America was in the City of Boston, in 1639. There were then 200 press offices in England. The second press was set up in London, England, in 1640. The third was set up in Cambridge, Mass., in 1641.

Why?

A query frequently comes up in our mind when traveling over different portions of this State and beholding the broad expanse of forests here and there; large areas of fertile land waiting for the industrious hands of men to develop them, and make them happy, prosperous homes. Why the over-crowded districts of Pennsylvania and New York do not seek these fair lands in the Smoky South, far away from the frost-bitten lands of their youth.

Our climate is much more mild, our summer and fall season longer, our winters much shorter, and of course, it requires less labor and much less expense to keep both family and live stock the year round.

Our lands will produce equal to the best of the old States, and a much greater variety of products.

We can hardly understand why people will pay $20 to $100 per acre for land up in those frost bitten and barren sections, when better land can be had in our smoky South for $5, $10 and $20 per acre.

We have a distinct recollection of our boyhood days, spent in Beaver county, Pa., of the cold winters and deep snows, of the long cold springs, that crept along until the middle of May before they would let go their icy fetters.

We have made frequent trips back to the home of our youth, only to increase our love and admiration for the blue hills of West Virginia; its sunshine and balmy air that gives us health and vitality.

Again we recognize a much kinder and sympathetic feeling for humanity in the average West Virginian than in our brethren of the North. Our people do not claim to the exquisite refinement inspired by many of the older States, but for real genuine hospitality and disposition to help one another in times of distress or sickness, they have no superiors. Hence, it is not to be wondered that those who leave here are never satisfied until they return again.

We need more unselfish enterprise and capital to develop our State.—Ex.

[The "why" would not be asked if the people of a great part of the State would show more energy in making good roads, advertising their lands abroad, selling off their wild lands at reasonable figures to industrious and energetic farmers from other States and other countries, and above all help build railroads.—Ed.]

Daniel Boone Min.

Washington, D.C.

"Daniel?"

"Yes, madam."

"In cleaning out rooms, etc., preparatory to finding places to hide away canned goods for the winter, I find in one of the warehouses this great heavy pair of rubber boots with such long tops. Whose are they?"

"The president's madam."

"Down in the leg of one of them I find this buck bottle with a high cork. What is that for?"

"Hut."

"And in the other leg is an old sock of cloth wrapped in an old cloth. Whose are they?"

"And I see. They are a pair left over by President Arthur."

"Thanks, Daniel! —from the editor's room."

Democratic Ticket.

FOR CONGRESS—3rd DISTRICT,

HON. C. P. SNYDER,
 of Knoxville.

FOR STATE SENATOR—8th DISTRICT,

HON. M. VAN PELT,
 of Fayette.

FOR HOUSE OF DELEGATES—4th DISTRICT,

HON. HENRY A. YEAGER,
 of Green Bank.

We learn from the papers that our nominee for Senator, M. Van Pelt, is improving rapidly and will be out in a short time and start on a vigorous campaign.

A. C. Minner, of Tucker county, was nominated by the Republicans
 for State Senator from the 10th Senatorial District. He'll not get there, Eli.

Jno. H. Croft, of Moorefield, W.
 Va., while gathering his peach crop was seized by two masked men and brutally choked and beaten and afterward shot through the side. He is in a critical condition.

Slight earthquake shocks occur almost daily at Charleston S. C. A hum of industry is heard everywhere in the city, and ere long much of it will be rebuilt.

The earthquake at Charleston seems to have greatly affected the wells in Texas. Some near Fort Worth which yielded the purest and best of water before the shock now yield murky, sulphurous water making the persons mouths very sore who drink of it.

At Augusta, Ga., the topography of the country has changed considerably since the earthquake. Many houses on the sand hills, which could not be seen from the city before are now plainly visible, proving that the land about the city has settled much.

Are They Lucky.

Judge Jno. Brannon received the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 1st District of this State on the 9th ballot. The convention was one of harmony and success is predicted.

Hon. Jas. A. Hutchinson, of Wood county, received the nomination for Congress by the Republicans in the 4th District of W. Va.
 He is after Hogg but will never catch him.

Hon. W. R. Morrison has been nominated for Congress from the 10th Illinois District. He will be elected.

When last heard from the Democratic Congressmen of the 2nd District of Ill. had been in session five days, an indicated 30 times and was still unable to make a choice.

Many others in the U. S. have received nominations, but they are not well known enough in this county to merit notice.

The Institute.

The Institute held recent sessions
 at Martin's Bottom, September 6th-11th.

It was jointly presided over by Co. Supt. H. M. Lockridge and Prof. J. W. Hinkle, with M. G. Mathews and J. Woods Price, Rec. Sect's and Chas. Cook, Cor. Sec. About 45 teachers were in attendance, from first to last, making it the largest meeting yet held.

A very long communication would be required to do full justice to the subjects discussed and the ability evinced by persons who took part in the discussions.

Tuesday evening Supt. Lockridge led off on the question "How to secure larger attendance in the public schools?" This was participated in by Messrs. Bing, Gillispie and others.

Kindness to children and sympathy with them in their amusements and friendly visits to the homes of the parents, were recommended as judicious and influential means of awakening interest and securing an informal full attendance.

Immediately after the question of compulsory attendance was taken up—"Must universal attendance be reached by the enactment and enforcement of a compulsory law or through the education of public sentiment?" This was led off by Wm.
 T. Price in the affirmative, and opposed by J. Woods Price, Henry Barlow, Supt. Lockridge and others.
 The Sentiments of the body were strongly opposed to compulsion.

On Wednesday evening Newton
 S. Brufey led off in an excellent address upon "Theory and Practice." (See program pp. 15 and 16). Messrs.
 Dyard, Henry, Prof. Kerr and others took prominent parts and the topic was well handled in a spirited manner. The Institute seemed to favor few rules but strict observance of the same. Opinion much divided as to how far the teacher should exercise authority and oversight. Prof.
 Kerr would restrict the teacher's authority to the school grounds; the others seem to feel they were more responsible as far as the home gate,
 where the public road was left.
 Once on parental premises the pupils passed from under the teacher's authority.

A subject not in the program
 "Necessity of more effective cooperation of teachers, patrons and school officers" elicited earnest and timely remarks from Prof. Hinkle, Supt.
 Lockridge, J. R. Henry and Woods
 Price.

Mr. C. B. Grimes presented instructive remarks upon penmanship.

Mr. Woods Price led off in an al-phabetic exercise that showed he had given the matter much study.

Prof. Kerr's lecture on "Science of Teaching" was a masterly effort.

The school was defined to be an institution where the young are trained to habits from which proceed the issues of life—for habits control and direct the destiny of individuals in all practical affairs.

On Friday morning Prof. Hinkle lectured on "Education and Instruction."

It was a masterly presentation of the mind and its department. In all the writer has ever listened to upon various occasions when the mind was discussed, he has never heard a better effort upon mental philosophy, for practical utility. It should be published and scattered everywhere among the scholars.
 The analysis sketched upon the board would make a most admirable chart for the school room.

The personnel of the Institute was very interesting. Many of the choicest young people of the county are conscientiously engaged in preparing themselves for their work, and there is a hopeful future for the school interests. It is expected that there will be over fifty scholars in operation this winter in the community.

The following resolutions were adopted:

1. Resolved, That the Legislature be requested to make it unlawful to grant a number three certificate more than once to the same applicant.

2. That the Legislature be hereby requested to make it lawful for Teachers who may have attended county Institutes for full terms, to teach 30 days for the school month, while those who neglect to attend be required to teach 22 days per month.

3. That it is the sense of this Institute that no person should be voted for as County Supt. who does not show by his active cooperation full sympathy with the public school system, and moreover that no persons should be supported for members of the Board of Education who do not pledge themselves to promote the interests of common school education.

That to enhance the usefulness of the schools it would be wise to extend the school term from four months to six months in the county of Pocahontas, and Co. Supt. is hereby respectfully requested to ascertain whether such an extension is practicable.

5. That the members of this Institute would hereby express most heartily their grateful appreciation of the faithful and efficient services of the county Supt. H. M. Lockridge and highly instructive lectures delivered by Prof. J. W. Hinkle, aided by Prof. Kerr, during the sessions of this body. These gentlemen deserve far more from the teachers of this county than a mere formal recognition of services so faithfully and acceptably rendered for their improvement and assistance in their all important work.

6. That the thanks of this body be cordially tendered the trustees of Martin's Bottom Church for the use of this house, and also to the citizens of the vicinity for the entertainment furnished at their homes.

Wm. T. Price, J. R. Henry, on

S. N. Brufey, Resolutions.

Resolutions looking to the extension of the course of study, compulsory attendance, where trustees should deem it best for the educational interests of such children as might be hindered by parents from going to school, and discretionary use of other series of text books than McGuffey's, were rejected.

Prof. J. W. Hinkle offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Institute are due and are hereby tendered Rev. Wm. T. Price for his instructive and highly entertaining lecture on the subject of morals and manners and how they should be taught in our schools.

Your correspondent was most favorably impressed and edified by the exercises, and many new ideas were received that will be of much practical use as well as a source of pleasure.

He hopes the teachers will make use of your paper as a medium of interchanging their views and thus enhance its usefulness as a county Journal. Yours as ever,

OBSERVER.

From all sections of the country
 come cheerful and encouraging accounts of the revival of business. It is not in the nature of a boom, but a legitimate and healthy activity, which promises to last.—Intelligencer.

Those who are saying we will have no revival of business until a Republican is elected President should take courage from the above clipping from the leading Republican journal in the State.

Fiduciary Notice.

The following Fiduciary accounts are subject to the examination of the Auditor General, who will be at the office of the Auditor General, at the State Capitol, in the city of Raleigh, N. C., on the 1st day of October, 1886.

It would be a justifiable act on the part of Judge Jno. Brannon, nominee for Congress, to demand money enough of the Register, manager of the campaign, for putting such a horrible picture of him in that paper.
